

I seriously request that the FCC not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

I work from my home and have three incoming lines. Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law has improved my time, both work and leisure, at home. I used to receive AT LEAST 3 or 4 calls each day (35-30 each week) from telemarketers. When I learned of the Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law I quickly signed up through the AG's office and my time at home has been of much higher quality than before, because of the almost total lack of contact by telemarketers. To say they were annoying, intrusive, and disruptive is an understatement.

As a professional, maintaining Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law intact is very important to me. While I am a strong believer in free speech, I also believe in the right to privacy in one's own home, and the telemarketers were seriously intruding on my privacy and personal business. I am quite capable of purchasing items I want or need on my own and have NEVER purchased anything from a telemarketer. I sincerely request that the FCC NOT take any action in any manner to weaken the Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law. Thank you,
